Getting started on Twitter

Should you tweet as your company or as yourself?

- If you're serious about Twitter then you should have a personal account and a business account
- People may search for your company by name so a brand / business account is useful
- Personal account better for engaging with people one-to-one
- Focus the business account just on business activities and news
- Having both keeps your company and you personally separate - important as the company grows
- You can use a brand account for things like customer service that really wouldn't be appropriate from your personal account
- Customers can use Twitter direct messages to communicate with your business
- You can retweet your brand content from your personal account (and vice versa)

Setting up a company account

- Same process as setting up an individual account
- You can't associate the same email address with more than one account
- You can't have multiple log ons for the same account which creates security issues (you can for a Twitter Ad account)
- Consider using a social media management tool e.g. Social Pilot, Hootsuite so that your team can tweet without needing access directly to the account
- Or use TweetDeck Teams which allows people to tweet from your account without sharing the password - more information about this here appears only to be available to subscribers now
- Turn on 2FA on the main account login - only be available to people who subscribe to X Premium

The importance of account security – anyone who has access to your account can tweet from it

Be careful if you're tweeting from multiple accounts

We've deleted the rogue tweet but rest assured the Red Cross is sober and we've confiscated the keys.

What makes a good Twitter profile?

- Use your real name / company name or as close to it as you can get
- For a company, try and use the same name as you use on your other social networks
- Use a real picture, ideally the same one you use on your other social networks
 - Don't change your picture too often - people remember pictures more than usernames
 - Make sure it's a professional-looking photo or your company logo
- Write a clear bio
 - Some idea of who you are / a bit of personality / what the company does
 - Clear expression of your interests / company background
 - You can use hashtags in your bio
- Include a link to your website
- Consider a custom background
- Point people to other channels if appropriate

What you see in your Twitter feed

For you / following

- For you = chosen by Twitter's algorithm
- More likely to see Twitter Blue accounts
- Will see tweets from accounts you're not following (and some that you are)
- Not in chronological order
- Following = chronological list of tweets from accounts you follow
- You can mute words that you aren't interested in - how to do that

Who to follow?

- The value of your Twitter feed is largely determined by who you follow
- Think about following competitors, suppliers, customers, industry figures, trade publications, conference organisers
- Make sure your profile is up to date and looks professional before you start following people
- Following is often reciprocal - if you follow someone they will check out your profile and may then follow you
- It is worth having a few tweets in your account before you start following if you want people to follow you back

How to get followers

- Make your Twitter feed interesting and relevant to the people you're interested in
- Share other people's content and engage with them directly
- Live tweet from events that you attend using the event hashtag
- Use hashtags but not too many
- You can sync your contacts from your phone
- Invite your customers to follow you

How many people should you follow?

- You cannot follow more than 400 people per day
- Try and keep your number of followers and people you follow roughly the same
- Once you reach 5,000 follows you won't be able to follow anyone else until your number of followers catches up
- If you are following many more people than are following you this makes your account look spammy and Twitter may restrict you from following anyone else
- If you hardly follow anyone then that looks like you're not interested in what anyone else has to say
- You're not obliged to follow everyone who follows you but as a general rule reciprocity is good

Twitter's rules prohibit...

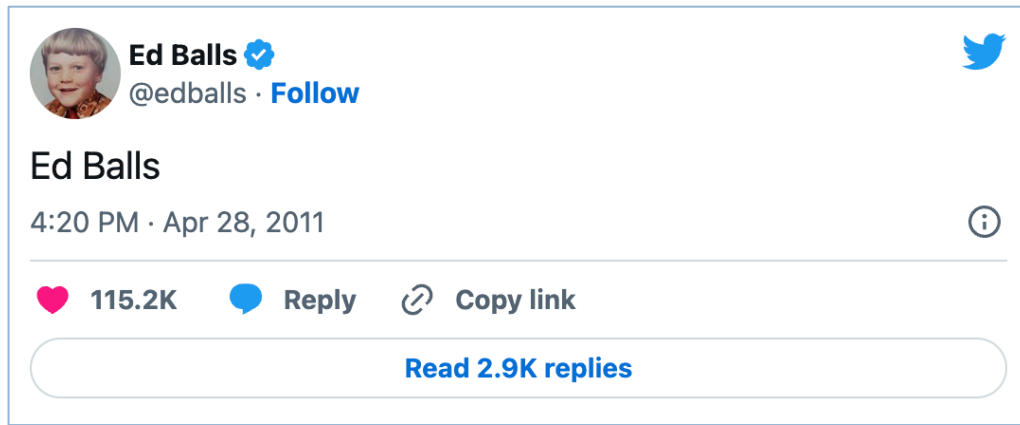

- Following and then unfollowing lots of accounts to inflate your own number of followers
- Automated following of lots of accounts in a short amount of time
- Duplicating the followers of another account, especially if you automate this
- Using any third party service that claims to add followers
- There is no benefit at all in 'buying followers' or anything else that artificially inflates your follower numbers

Click the 'post' button

The image shows a screenshot of the Twitter/X mobile app interface. On the left is a navigation sidebar with icons for Home, Explore, Notifications (with a '17' badge), Messages, Lists, Communities, Verified, Profile, and More. A blue 'Post' button is located at the bottom of this sidebar and is circled in red. The main content area is titled 'Home' and has two tabs: 'For you' (selected) and 'Following'. Below the tabs is a settings gear icon and a dropdown menu set to 'Everyone'. The main text area contains the prompt 'What is happening?!' and a link that says 'Everyone can reply'. At the bottom of this area are icons for adding photos, GIFs, lists, emojis, and locations. A blue 'Post' button is also located here, circled in red. Below the composition area is a link that says 'Show 35 Tweets'. The first tweet is from 'BBC News (UK)' (@BBCNews) posted 4 hours ago, with the text 'Shock after sewage releases at Cornish tourist spot Harlyn Bay'. The tweet includes a large photo of a beach with green water and a BBC NEWS logo at the bottom. The user's profile information at the bottom left shows a gear icon, the name 'Awesome Tech Trai...', and the handle '@AwesomeTechTr'.

The main text area contains the prompt 'What's happening?'. Below the text area is a toggle for 'Everyone can reply'. At the bottom, a row of icons for adding content is circled in red: an image icon, a GIF icon, a poll icon, an emoji icon, and a video icon. To the right of these icons is a location pin icon. At the bottom right is a blue 'Tweet' button.

- Add an image
- Add a gif
- Set up a poll
- Include an emoji
- Schedule your tweet

Structure of tweets

- There is a limit of 1,000 tweets per account per day
- A tweet has a limit of 280 characters
- X Premium subscribers have a limit of 4,000 characters
- All links are automatically altered to 23 characters (even if the original URL is less than 23 characters long) and are included in the 280 character limit
- If you're linking to pages on your website make sure each page has a social media title and image set up so they display nicely when tweeted
- BUT Elon Musk has just announced that X will no longer show headlines and other text from news links but just the image so this might have a significant effect on how links to other websites render in the future

What displays in the tweet?

- If you include a link and the page you're linking to has a Twitter card configured then this will (currently!) show in the media preview
- This is determined by the way in which you have set up your website (or the way in which the website you are linking to is set up)
- Advice from Twitter about configuring cards
- You can override the media preview by loading up your own image directly into your tweet
- If you include a link and the page you're linking to does not have a Twitter card configured then you will just see the link text

Comments and mentions

- People can reply to your tweets with comments of their own
- They can also write their own tweets and mention you in them
- It is good practice to acknowledge these even if you just 'like' the comment or tweet
- Interaction on Twitter is a good way to grow your influence
- Don't ignore negative comments / mentions
- If you get abusive comments / mentions you should report the accounts to Twitter
- Elon Musk has said you will no longer be able to block people on Twitter, only mute them

Good responses to mentions by brand accounts

The screenshot shows a Twitter thread. At the top, a user named 'dallas marie' (@wtfdallas_) has posted a tweet: 'all these @Wendys commercials are making me want wendy's'. Below this, the official Wendy's account (@Wendys) has replied with the text 'ITS WORKING'. The Wendy's profile picture is the iconic red-haired girl logo, and the account name is 'Wendy's' with a blue verification checkmark. A 'Follow' button is visible next to the Wendy's profile. The tweet has 15 likes, as indicated by the 'LIKES 15' text and a row of 15 small profile pictures. The timestamp '10:51 AM - 5 Apr 2017' is shown at the bottom of the tweet. Interaction icons for reply, retweet, and like are visible at the bottom of the tweet.

How reposts work

- Reposting other people's content is a good way to get started on Twitter
- Including a mix of your own tweets, replies and reposts is a good way to make your Twitter feed useful to people
- When you repost something you are sharing that tweet with all your followers
- You see the reposts of people you follow in your timeline
- You cannot repost content from locked / protected accounts
- If you repost a tweet you're offering an implied endorsement of the content of the tweet AND anything that tweet links to so be careful

How to get reposts of your own tweets

- You can repost your own tweets but don't make a habit of this
- People will repost things that they find useful or interesting so the best way to get reposts is to make your content useful and interesting!
- Use hashtags but not too many - hashtags mean more people are likely to see your tweet but too many looks spammy
- Include a link, ideally to an image or video - tweets with richer content are more likely to be reposted
- Mention someone in the tweet
- Comment on someone else's tweet

Favorites / likes

- Act as a small ‘reward’ for tweets that you like
- If you really like a tweet then it is better to repost it
- You can use likes as a way of saving tweets you’re interested in
- BUT remember your likes are public!

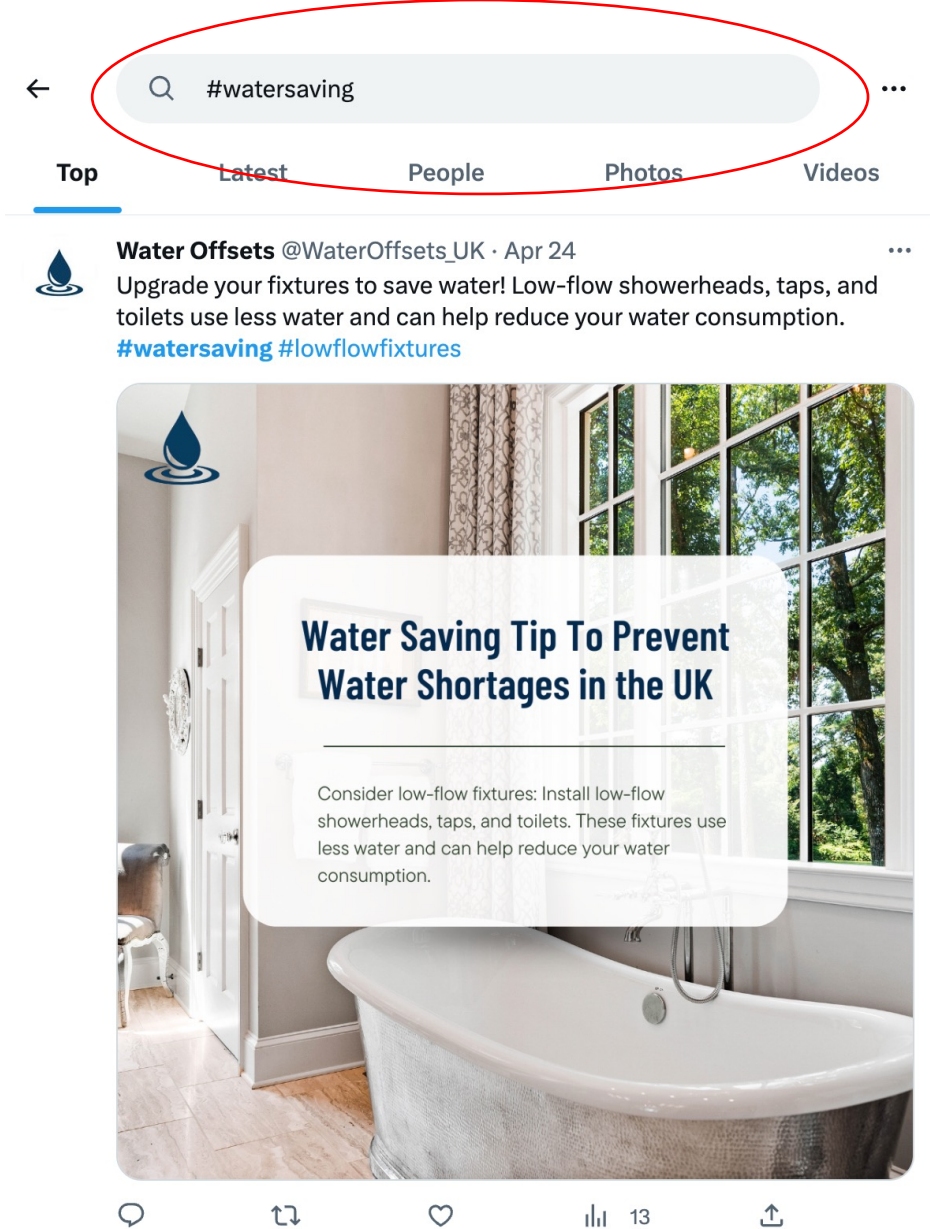

How hashtags work

- A hashtag is a way of saying that your tweet is part of a particular conversation
- Including hashtags can get your tweets in front of more people
- People check hashtags they're interested in so may see your tweet even if not following you directly
- Don't include more than 2 or 3 hashtags as this looks spammy
- Hashtags only work if your audience uses them
- If you want to set up your own hashtag:
 - Check that it isn't already being used
 - Go for something that represents your brand and can be easily identified
 - Not too long
 - Check what it looks like written down
- You can't own a hashtag and there is no central register

Find out which hashtags your audience uses

- Follow people in your audience and see what hashtags they use
- Search for hashtags and see if people are using them
- Trial and error

Read a new hashtag carefully before committing...

Good use of hashtags

- Without hashtags your tweets will only be seen by your followers
- Use hashtags to provide a sense of community at events
- Find out what hashtags are already being used in your industry and use them (appropriately)
- Use hashtags consistently
- If starting your own make them easy to remember
- Don't use spaces or punctuation in hashtags

What to tweet about?

- It's fine to start out with just reposting but you have to start generating your own content at some point
- Industry news with your own comment
- Replies to other people
- Links to your website or blog
- Photos with captions - at events, of your staff, products, offices, customers
- You can connect your other networks with Twitter
- Embed video (240 seconds max) - better than linking to video
- Fine to have a bit of personality in your tweets, even if tweeting as your business BUT be very careful with humour, Twitter can be very unforgiving
- Mix of personal and professional (if tweeting as yourself)

Balance your content

Advice from Twitter

The rule of thirds

- One-third of your Tweets promote your business or drive conversions.
- One-third of your Tweets share curated content from industry thought leaders.
- One-third of your Tweets involve personal interaction with your followers.

The 80-20 rule

- 80 percent of your Tweets are designed to inform, educate, or entertain
- 20 percent of your Tweets directly promote your business or drive conversions

Scheduled tweets

- Scheduling tweets is vital when you're managing corporate Twitter accounts
- Not always possible to tweet every tweet 'live'
- Use tools like Hootsuite, Tweetdeck etc to manage multiple accounts
- BUT you need to be careful with scheduled tweets
- The point of Twitter is to make connections with people and it's hard to do this with scheduled tweets
- Remember to take down scheduled tweets if things change

Twitter as a community

Twitter works best as a community

- Whatever you are interested in, there will be a community of other people interested in it on Twitter
- The more people who are in your field you follow, the more likely it is that you will find out about these communities
- Search out communities that already exist or start your own (although getting momentum this way is HARD!)
- Run Twitter chats on topics of interest to your followers
- Build Twitter lists
- Participate in existing community activities

Was due to get 10.49 and 11.19 from Oxford to Bicester Village. Both cancelled.

When is next train? Will 11.49 definitely run?

Thanks
